

This map illustrates the extensive flight network originating from Salt Lake City (SLC), marked with a yellow star and red text. The network is represented by numerous blue lines connecting SLC to various destinations across North America and to several international locations. Key destinations include major hubs like Chicago, Denver, Dallas, and Atlanta, as well as numerous smaller cities and international airports. An inset map in the bottom left corner provides a detailed view of the local flight network around SLC, showing connections to nearby cities like West Yellowstone, Sun Valley, and Twin Falls. The map also includes labels for major cities and regions in the United States, Canada, and Mexico, as well as international destinations like London, Amsterdam, and Paris.
